8. DESCRIPTION AND CHARACTERISTICS OF AREA:
   Terrain: Level to steep hilly and hilltop. Some construction hazards. Land improved 90% unmatted; 10 hatched average 50%. Many improvements occupy large homesites. Good restrictions cover large part of area and are said to be enforced. Zoning is largely single-family residential. Conveniences are all readily available. This is one of the oldest sections of South Pasadena, early development being in the nature of small estates. The area is far-flung following to some extent a hilly section known as Monterey Hills. It is a popular district with those having business in Los Angeles, and its population to a great extent is made up of Los Angeles business and professional people. Construction ranges from standard to superstandard quality. Maintenance is of good character and in many cases mitigates age and obsolescence. Architectural designs of improvements are of great variety and this, together with a large variance in age, gives the area a somewhat heterogeneous aspect. Population is fairly homogeneous, although there is a wide differential in incomes. The area contains many large old live oak trees which add to its charm and desirability. Conveniences to Los Angeles is one of the location's chief attractions. While development has never been very active its growth has been quite steady and there are indications that its trend of desirability is still upward. However, until this is more apparent than at present it is thought best to assign to the area a "medial blue" grade.

CAUTION: This area is currently affected in whole or in part by an Ad valorem Tax District. Individual properties should be checked for this hazard.
