   Agent’s Note: This institution lost about 23% of its deposits between December 31, 1929 and 1934. During bank holiday it sold $7,500,000 preferred stock to the R. F. C. and discounted liberally through that agency and Federal Reserve Bank; also sold a large amount of residential mortgages to HOLC. Reliable and informed sources state that the measures taken were largely of a precautionary character, and the institution, it is believed, was never in danger of a collapse.

   This old institution is very active in the residential loan field and is advertising extensively for FHA Title II loans. One of its most effective advertising mediums is called a "Home Selector". The prospective borrower presses the button on the device representing the amount he can afford to pay monthly, and a home such as the monthly payment will buy, under the FHA insured mortgage plan, is illuminated upon the screen.

   The American Trust Company has 40 branches scattered throughout the principal cities of Northern California, and in addition has a number of agents or solicitors taking residential loan applications.

   The figures shown under items 7 to 16, inclusive, are approximate estimates of the institution’s activities in San Francisco, based upon actual totals shown by its records; the figures were carefully checked and found to be reasonably correct.

   The following record of mortgages and releases filed in San Francisco County also tends to confirm this opinion: (Continued on next page)
