lieved that the table given above is much more representative as a record of the growth in population.

In the Appendix table above referred to, San Jose is shown to have had a population of 21,500 in 1900, which increased to 28,946, or 34.6%, in the ten year period; 37% in the period from 1910 to 1920, and 45.4% between 1920 and 1930. This is a larger percentage of increase than is shown by its metropolitan area; however, as before stated, the growth of San Jose has been at least partially accomplished by annexations, these annexations being as follows:

March 6, 1911 - Gardnier Addition, includes Areas D-8, C-11, and the business district immediately to the east of those areas.

Nov. 2, 1911 - East San Jose, which includes Areas C-9 and C-10, D-6, D-9, and the north half of D-10.

Oct. 16, 1922 - Palm Haven Addition, which includes the northern portion of B-6 and extreme northern section of C-13.

July 1, 1924 - Richard Chase Addition, includes a small section of the industrial district lying east of D-6.

Aug. 30, 1924 - Industrial Addition, includes commercial section lying east of C-11.

Dec. 8, 1925 - Hester Addition, includes Areas A-1, B-2, B-3, and parts of C-5 and C-11.

Feb. 4, 1926 - French Addition, includes a large part of the northern half of C-13.

May 7, 1930 - Cottage Grove Addition, includes a small tract in eastern D-11.

Oct. 1, 1936 - Willow Glen Addition, includes B-7, C-15, the southern part of C-13, and hatched area surrounding D-7.

From a residential standpoint, the Hester Addition and the Willow Glen Addition have been of outstanding importance to San Jose, as they at the present time account for by far the larger part of San Jose's best residential districts.
